Circumstaters are favoring the cause of labor country to an unprecedented extent. The late terrible war which has swept a large crition of country with a besom of destrucion, has created a demand for labor, as well a apital, that has never presented itself before. Not only has the results of labor in the form of houses, machinery, ntensils of labor of all kinds, and everything produced by labor, been lestroyed throughout the South, leaving this and greatly in need of the assistance of labor part of our country, who have been taker om the ranks of the great army of labor, and burled into the great slanghter-pen of war, has necessarily reduced the supply of labor, while the demand is increased beyond all precedent. We therefore draw as a certain and undeniable conclusion from these facts, that a vast change has come over the important onestic more fully appreciated and better paid, especially in the present times, in which it is in so great demand; that this increased remnneration but just, and should be demanded of capital. But like all revolutions, this revolution in la or needs a guiding and controlling principle. The tendency of human nature is ever to exremes. Like the bubble in the carpenter's evel, we move precipitately from one extrem

While, therefore, the foregoing reflection nd propositions are evident to every thinking mind, we should guard against this natural ten ency to extremes. It is possible for labor to imitate the false and victous course heretofore pursued by capital, and become overweening and unjust. Either extreme is prejudicial to he best interest of society. Labor and capital should go hand in hand, and neither should be allowed to tyrannize over the other.

With this natural proneness to extremes, the boring classes, in many instances that come under our observation, are disposed to extor-tion. The already high prices of labor do not atisfy the excited minds of the men of muscie and skill. Though wages are more exorbitant to what was ever known before, the cupidity of nany is only whetted by the continual conex

Now, it is an old adage that "two wrong ever made n right." And both extremes are reprehensible, and subversive of the best inter-ests of society. While, therefore, labor should be well paid, it is not desirable that the laboring man should extertion any more than that the wan of capital should endeavor to defrand. In stice on the part of either will eventually mil-tate against the offending party.

Let us content ourselves for the present in losing this article with a caption to the laborg classes to not extortion. By demanding no ebound on themselves by affecting all the ne searies as well as inxuries of life, and thus all the advantages gained in one way will be lost in

THE OLDER STATES.

Looking east of the Mississippi, we find that what we now term the older States are yet young in vigorous enterprise. The cost fields of Petnestvania yield to the extending operation of the miner a large annual increase. The product of anthracite and bituminous coal last year is estimated at the enormons total of 13,760,000 tons, worth in the aggregate, at the mines, $22,200,000. The iron product of the Keystone State last year is estimated at 700,000 tons, and nearly 300,000 tons of railroad iron were made in the State during that time, while the castings of cannon and machinery swell the vast product of labor. Nor is this all; for, to use the language of Mr. Evecett, up his list public speech, "the very clods of the earth are 'pouring out rivers offoil," and creating a new 'interest, which is rising rapidly to a riverry with the mineral enterprises. To the Fditurs of the New York Times: I see in your columns the following respecting Gen Grant's name, copied from the Norwhile (Conn.) Builetin:

"As is not infrequently the case in such circumstances, there was no little discussion on the subject of naming the litustrivus stranger. Finally, the following method was adopted of solving the difficult: The various names which had been suggested were placed in a hat and sheken together, and it was agreed that the first one drawn out should be adopted. That name was 'Ulyses,' and the future Lieutenant-General was called Ulyses Simpson Grant, receiving for his middle name the maiden name of his mother. This simple but truthful statement of the facts will serve to refue the various abend stories which have been floating about concerning the General's name."

Mr. Jesse R. Grant, the General's father, wrote me that he was named Hiram Ulysase—the latter being selected by the granfmother, who was particularly interested in the hero of arctint history. Hiram was preferred by other members of the family, and so the matter was compromised by calling the child Hiram Ulyses. When he obtained the appointment as codet, by mistake the name was entered Ulyses S., and not regarding the chinge important, the friends "concluded to let it stand." I make the statement because it would seem the father ought to know the origin of his son's name; and all the particulars of the great Captain's early life, given in his biography, written by your correspondent, he has in the handwriting of his father.

P. C. HEADLEY.

Twice Heng -The following incident, which was sent to us, occurred between one and two years since, on the Harpeth river, Tennessee, A detachment of Union troops was stationed there, and were surprised by the rabel General Wheeler. There was a considerable amount of Government property in the cere of the Feder-als, and doubtless this was the principal object cher at the top of his voice, though he was often threatened with death for eo doing by his captors.

"As long as our boys lick you, Mr. Johnnies!" retorted he "I don't care how often you kill me! If we hada't been surrendered, we would have thrashed you ourselves. Hip! hip! hurtal! II! that'e beantiful; give It to them! Put the forks into them. They can steal, but can't stand the steel!"

Thus he continued to shout until the rebels, being forced to retreat, they carried him along with them; he never ceased to cheer for the Union and to tannt them with cowardice. As soon as a halt was mede, the Confederates, enraged at their defeat, and still more enraged at losing the baggage they had taken, began to wreak their malice upon their prisoners. Burron was speedily selected as a sacrifice and was taken by five or six rebels into a thicket.

Here they subjected the brave man to every torture and indignity they could think of until at last he could not stand up. But, faint and wounded as he was, he continued to defy them. Let's hang him just a little, that'll convert him." Enggested one of the fiends. Instantly a rope was provined, thrown across n limb, a noose made, and Burton run up, his head striking the limb with violence. Then he was let de wn, and asked if he would recant. AN OLD CITIZEN GONE.—It is n painful duty to record the death of one of our oldest and best citizens, John Dowdall, who departed this life, on his "old homestead," in this county, october 27th, in the seventy-first year of his age. Mr. Dowdall was born in Virginia, raised in Kentneky, and emigrated to this county at an early day. Being of untiring disposition, he chose a farmer's life, which occupation he followed rigidity after the Kentneky style—make a plenty and live npon it—therefore he never a large fortune; was what is usually termed a good liver; being of wealthy parentage, bis carly life was spent as are, or were, generally the sons of the Sonth, in ease and independence, with a liberal expenditure of money for churtites, and also for pleasyre, which habits stuck to him through life. Not being an asplrant for effice, he consequently was never before the people for public honors. At the age of sevencen be emisted as a private in the war of 1812, his modesty causing bim to decline n lleutenuncy in ried Miss English, danghter of Elisha English, of this State, aftewards long a resident of our little city. Mr. Dowdall, though of Southern parcetage, education, and babits, was a Union man, ever and at all times; and was as willing to make sacrifices for his country during our recent national difficulties as he was when bearing his rifle bravely through the enows of 1812-15. He now peacefully rests in our grave-yard, bealde his first wite, who preceded him some eighteen years. Mr. Dowdall died as he lived, "The noblest work of God—an honest man." He leaves a large circle of acquaintances and friends to monru his loss. To the family relations we offer our heartfelt summathy, especially to our brother of the editoriel pression, william T. Dowdall, his youngest son, and our warm personal friends and intimate anyusintance; and whilst we extend to him our hand of sympathy and condolence, can only eav as words of navice, follow in the footsteps of him who is now no more, but whose practices and precepts are worthy to live forever.

These are surprising facts, if true, and are known, we presume, to but few, if any, of those who contemplate emigrating to Beazil, in concequence of their attachment to the institution of slavery. There is one more important fact which such persons should well consider. While it is true that African slavery is a law of that Empire, there are causes now at work that will, no doubt, accomplish the downfall of that institution, certainly within a life-time. The Emperor is himself an advocate of emandipation. With there facts established, there will be we opine, an end put to these Southern scheme of immigration, to Brazil, at least. Planting is gone—agriculture is gone—com-merce is gone, we are eaten up by debt—and there are not half our woes, brought on by Seward's nigger policy. This is the close of a letter to us from some amonymous and unrependent Southern rebel. He should remember that if "planting is gone and agriculture is gone," it isn't all owing, or half owing, to 'Seward'e nigger pol icy." The rebel ion and the war growing necessarily and directly out of it would have do stroyed for a time Southern "planting and agriculture" without the aid of any "nigger po tey." Our correspondent should bear in mind that, if "commerce is gone," its destruction in Our correspondent should bear in mind the South was a natural and inevisable result PRATHER & SMITH of the rebeltion, and not of "Seward's nigger policy," and that its partial destruction in the North was the consequence of a system of rebel "privateering," to use the gentlest term wholly unanthorised by the laws of nations. LADIES' AND MISSES' FURS He should consider that, if he and his South ern friends are "eaten up by debt," the rebellion created not only the vast rebel debt, destined to utter repudiation, but the vast Federal debt, which is to be and will be paid. And if, as he says, he has not enumerated "half the woes brought on by Seward's nigger policy," perhaps he may devote an hour or so to enumerating the rest. It is well known that we have steadily opposed a portion of the negro policy of the Administration, but we have no patience with those miserable rebel malignants, who ascribe to it all the woes of the last four and a half years. They have simply Satan's malice with-out his sense. Probably the few we speak of have all taken the oath of loyalty, but this has only made them the more furiously disloyal Whilst swearing for the Union with their lips, they were swearing at it in their perjured souls. But their curses may yet fall in blood and fire upon their heads and hearte, or in showers of ropes upon their necks.

We know that Northern abolitionism eras perated the South and gave the much desired present for secresion—but never just cause for is.

We were correct in the opinion we ex sed that the telegraphic report of Presi dent Johnson's dispatch to the Governor of Mississippi was incorrect. What the President said was that "the negro troops would be with drawn from Mississippi, when, in the opinion of Portable Steam Engines the Government, peace, order, and civility have been restored and can be maintained withou "Liem." His whole dispatch is embodied in ou Boring and Extracting Tools, Washington dispatches published yesterday and republished to-day, and we call public attention especially to it. It is an admirable document Pumps and Tubing In our opinion, "peace, order, and civility" can even now be better maintained in Mississippi Always on hand. without the megro troops than with them, bu it requires very little deference on our part to the Federal authorities to concede that they have better means of judging than we have and we cannot for a moment doubt that the are acting and will act with a sole view to th best interests of the Union. It is to be hope that their unquestionable patriotism will be cheerfully and promptly met by a corresponding patriotism on the part of all the Southern States. The fearful era of the fierce and unbridled disloyalty of those States is, we trust rapidly passing away. If they are not hope ion and make the best of it. And mo surely they will find the best good enough.

The telegraph announces that the Gov erament assumes, and acts upon the assum tion, that the war still exists. In what sense and where does the war still exist? In any of the Southern States, all of which have formally laid down their arms? If any of those Stat were now, without notice, to attack the Federal fortifications and garrisons within their borders, is it supposable that the Washington Government would treat their forces as legiti-mate belligerents?

of There seems good ground to lear that core Southern State Conventions, which have Steinway Pianos.

The St. Lonis Republican says of the Philharmonic Concert given in that city on Thurs-day night last: "The concert opened with the magnificent chorus from St. Paul, by Mendelssohn, 'Sleeper's Wake,' &c., and was rendered symphony in C minor left the andience compar heard olten and makes larger demands upon an orchestra than the Philharmonie Society can move through an atmosphere of doubt, contradiction, and dissatisfaction, have not that charm for an audience which goes to hear music in order to get rid of this atmosphere, produce by works like the pastoral symphony of Be tboven, for instance, or his magnificent symphony in A major, wherein the spirit of negation is utterly overcome, and the hearer imme-diately elevated to the pure region of blessed life. Of the sacred part of the programme, and, indeed, of the whole concert, Mr. Sobolewski's chorus, 'Evenings in Greece,' was the chief attraction. The opening symphony, with its beautiful languishing notes, carries us at once to the pestoral sonthern scene, so beantifully described by the poet. The first chorns takes up the scene with spirit, and moves beautifullforward to greater animation, in which movement we only discover one fault, namely: the stately slowness of the male voices, inquiring: 'What shall we dance?' The musical movement is in conflict with the idea of the piece, and as such should be sacrificed to the harmony of the Mendelesohn's overture, "The Ocean at R s and Prosperous Voyage," did not please. It is hadly worked ont, and cannot for a moment b compared with Beethoven's cantata on the same entiget. The aufulness of the ocean's slience, which is the chief feature of Goethe's poem, is not suggested for a moment by Mendelssohn; his music representing a sweet quiet gliding over a river or lake; no vastness, no terrible underground of the threatening character of the ness. The second part of the overture again lacks unity of movement and cheerfulness.

A special to the Heraid awa gentlemen, and some of them exceeds soldiers, who have recently come up to Washington from the Vailey of Virginia, report the condition of things throughout that portion of the State to be highly satisfactory for the coming winter.

All classes of farmers have succeeded in harvesting crops of grain sufficient for kome emand bacon for export to the less fortunate regions of Central Georgia and Western North Carolina. Mysterlously enough, money has come to be plenty for purposes of trade and the payment of taxes, and it is used a great deal more liberally than these people were accustomed to use it in years before the war. It is chiefly used in plantation improvements, building fences, &c. Central Virginia has been reinforced since the war by many live Yankee farmers, although this fact may not be generally known; and they have not only lived down Old Dominion prejudices against their class, but have imbued the easy-going Virginia farmer with something of a Yankee spirit of progress. More of them will be welcome, and land will be sold them cheap. The freedmen amoug them do not stand particularly in need of commiscration.

HOW ONE PRESS IN BATTLE .- BY A SOLDIER People often wonder how one feels in battle All men are not affected alike. Some are coo! determined, and courageous; some lose all judg nent, and will, single-handed, rush upon hun dreds; others are entirely unmanned, tremble like aspens, seem dead to every emot honor or feeling of shame, and will slink into coverts, or run from the field. Lord Forth in that some tory of the tories would be appoint the Crimean war is an instance. If skirmishers engage prior to a general battle, and a desulnsed to it, and, as the battle warms, it frequentthe first few shots, now rush on like heroes.

I remember well my feelings during the first battle in which I was engaged. The night before, we received orders to prepare to attack he enemy early on the morrow. All was now bastle, burry, and anxiety. Guns were cleaned eens filled knapeacks lightened, letters written. We had reveral in our company who had always isted of their bravery and prowess, men who had been "spolling for a fight," as they said. These were now as still as mice: they didn't reep. One of them, who had taken a master's degree in all kinds of profaulty, now borrowed a Bible, sat down and read it for some time, and timated to his messmate the propriety of pray ing before going to sleep that night. It is not wave man on the field of battle; it is your quie',

I confess a feeling of dread and anxiety stole over me. Battle was certain, the enemy was strongly posted, and we had desperate work before us. I wanted to go into battle: yet I readed it like death. I slept but little the night. The morning came, and our columns wood. The first intimation we had of the enemy was the skirmishing between his outposts and our vanguard, the former falling back as the latter advanced. We passed out of the wood. and rapidly deployed into line of battle, a gentle sloping hill hiding the enemy from our view in Cuba and Porto Rico is the most imperative of the duties of the Government. They begin to perceive that unless the further importation make a flank and rear attack on the enemy; and while so doing, it was of theutmost importance that we should hold his attention in front. We marched steadily up the hill till the whole line will be some day "a ruinous solution" of the of the enemy burst upon our view; there we halted, and for some minutes not a gun was fired on either side. There stood the two armies each waiting for the other to begin the work of death. The faces of our men looked pale and determined; some of them stood like statues. others were nervous and uneasy. It was the time to test their courage. A line of cannon was bearing directly upon us. Death to many of us was certain. Who will it be? thought I. A singular feeling came over me; a confused gross already emancipated by Spanish laws, but image of a mother and sister appeared flitting and floating before my imagination like dissolving chadows, while the tremendous reality in into the island in violation of the treaty obliga-front opppressed me with dreadful forebodings. A few moments passed, like those that inter-vene between drawing the cap over the crimi-commission" decides that she was lawful prize,

Our Colonel passed along in front of the line, and urged us to stand firm until the proper time, and the day would be ours. It is a task to hold men exposed to an to be to send the "emancipados" back to Africa. enemy's fire without allowing them to return it. The new system is to be inaugurated by the They will soon run, one way or the other. The transportation to Fernando Po of one hundred enemy's chot now began to howl around us and three negroes captured from a Portuguese plough through our ranks, and tear up the earth shout our feet. A six-nound hall cut off the bayonet of my mesomate on my left; a moment more and one struck him in the breast, severing him almost in twain. He recled and fell like a log. The hot blood from his heart spirted full in my face. Great God, how I felt! A faint cickening censation came over me. I stooped down over him. He smiled faintly, spoke my name, gasped and expired. He was frightfully manufed. I was maddened to desperation All thought of fear vanished; I could have fought thousands. The command, "Fire!" rang along the line, and a tremendous crash of musketre answered the command. We now loaded and fired for life. Dense volumes of sulphurons smoke hung like a pall over us and shut out the enemy from our sight. The battle grew warm ing of shells, the thunders of the artillery, the commingled with curses, prayers, and groans of the wounded and dying, filled all the air. Our men, black with smoke and powder, looked like devils incarnate, as they plied their work

At length a breeze rolled away the smokethat shrouded us, and disclosed our other columns bearing down upon the enemy's flank. Now was the declaive moment. "Charge bayonets!" rang out; and with loud abouts we rushed forward to the assault. A storm of grape and canister was hurled against us as we neared the batteries. Like maddened tigers, our men leapad forward with the cold steel. The struggle over the guns was desperate. It was a butcher savage in the extreme. The enemy soon broke and fied, leaving as mosters of the field. Since that time I have not felt the least dread or hesitation on entering a battle. After the first few shots, I fire away as coolly as when hunting

WHAT THE TELEGRAPH DID. -The value of great but familiar things ceases to be adequately estimated when custom has made them familiar. The steam-engine, by whose potent aid this newspaper is printed, was a miracle of mechanical science when first given to the world by James Watt, its inventor, and is not less so now-only we are accustomed to it. The achieves wonders, which are not considered wonderful, because they are done every hour in the day and night. So with railroad traveling. It used to be a tedious journey of two days from Philadelphia to New York on one side and to Baltimore on the other; but, thanks to the steam-locomotive and the iron-rall, we grumble if either trip occupies as much as four hours. Above all, we have the telegraph mo mently sending intelligence all through the annihilate time and space, and very few pause to think what a surprising thing is done-ever being done. We are used to it, and use makes us thoughtless of its value.

There is the telegraph. Some forty-three years ago, when George the Fourth was on his way to visit Scotland, the Marquis of London-derry, better known by his historical title of Lord Castlereagh (a name which Irishmen who think of Ninety eight can never forget), committed suicide. The deed was done on the 12th of August, 1822. The news reached Edinburg. from London, by special couriers, in three days—the journey, fully four hundred miles, is now done, every day in the week, in less than ten hours. It took over a month before Mr. Canning was appointed to succeed Lord Londonderry as Foreign Secretary, and this delay was largely canned by the length of time it took to communicate between the King in Scotland and the Cabinet in London. Now mark COMMISSION, &C.

Palmerston died, at Brockett Hall, in Herte, some distance from London. The news was immediately telegraphed to Queen Victoria, ther at Balmoral, in the highlands of Aberdeen-shire, in the North of Scatland, and to Lord

Russell and the other Cabinet Ministers who were scattered all over the country. Within an hour after it occured, Lord Palmerston's death was known to Queen Victoria, who was five be done, and on that same day, within fou ours after Lord Palmerston had breathed hi last, she had telegraphed to Loudon, authoriz

Queen had sat down to her dinner at Balmait all, without delay or trouble, without suspense or expense. Compare this with what occured in 1822, when Castlereagh perished. Conriers sent, by the public mail-roads, from London to Edinburg to inform the king-post-chaises and ons, to carry the sad and important news to the scattered members of Lord Liverpool's administration. More couriers, more king's messengers in post-chaises, any quantity of let ter-writing, a great deal of time lost, and finally the vacancy in the Government filled no. after more than a month's pause, during which the public mind of Eagland was kept in agitation and suspense, for the popular wish that Can ning should take the office vacated by Castle reach's self-murder; and the popular fear was

ed. On the recent occasion, thanks to the telegraph, every arrangement practicable at the time, was made within eight hours after Palmer ston's death, including a communication from to Russell, offering him the Premiership, and his response accepting of it. We do not pause to reflect upon these very surprising feats.

robody. The thing was done with republican simplicity, and it was not the less well done on that account. One of the London journals giancing at the fact, shrewdly insinuates: "This think the republican, and inexpressive simplication rangement is so pleasant that people ma events, Queen Victoria, if she ever thinks on

ROOMS AT THE NATIONAL HOTEL.

DR. COUDEN will devote special attention to the treatment of Cancer and Cancerons affections.

In calling attention to my Cancer Antidote, a new treatment for Cancer, permit me to say that is the most wonderful discovery ever mide in medicine. It is great decideration so long sought for by the Médical Francisco and the cancer and all cancerous sfillictions; the modus operated of the antidote is sparently by entering into the chemical composition of the cancer, cancerous, malignant, or nahealthy growth, thereby removing all life and vitality, antidoting, killing, and destroying the cancer, every particle root and fibre belonging to it, without pain or the use of the knilling, and destroying the cancer, every particle root and fibre belonging to it, without pain or the use of the knilling, and ceitroying the cancer, every particle root and fibre belonging to it, without pain or the use of the knilling, and ceitroying the cancer, every particle root and fibre belonging to it, without pain or the use of the knilling, and ceitroying the cancer, every particle root and fibre belonging to it, without pain or the use of the knilling, without the loss of hlood, or in the least affecting the sound field. It can be applied to the naked eye or an epen wound, as easily and receip as water. By this means larve exacers can be acc, where no other treatment tails. The medical fracturity and all interested are invited to call, and I will ROOMS AT THE NATIONAL HOTEL Scrofula, Rheumatism, and Liver Compining Treated with success, entupive diseases, such as ulcers, piles, and tumors, reald head syphilis, cyphilitie affections, mercurial diseases, dyspepels, and indigestion, eriseplies goltre, or swell neck.
